BACKCOUNTRY ACCESS

Daylight Flying

Helicopter schedules are designed with daylight hours in mind and to allow sufficient time to remove all staff and equipment following an event in the mountains. As the length of daylight fluctuates so too does our daily operational period. Head-Line Mountain Holidays and, or its affiliates, partners or associated operators may choose to cancel or postpone flying if we deem that the weather or required visibility is unsatisfactory or dangerous. Ground transportation alternatives may be made available at that time if appropriate.

Please refer to the weather cancellation policies as it pertains to your situation.

Mountain Egress

Please note that while every effort is made to ensure that access to and from any given remote facility, site or enclave is possible, Head-Line activities and events take place in remote mountainous environments and may preclude access from these locations from time to time. Helicopters do not have the ability to fly in the mountains at night or in low visibility conditions and travel may therefore be restricted to ground transportation.

Travel may also be restricted in adverse weather or avalanche conditions or through challenging terrain which may prevent egressing certain areas at certain times.

Backcountry Enclaves / Wilderness Retreats

While every conceivable effort is made to ensure that remote backcountry experiences and overnight stays are as comfortable as possible, it should be noted that these locations and facilities may not be equipped with running water, running hot water, shower or flush toilet facilities. Clean, hygienic services appropriate to wilderness experiences are provided and exceed remote wilderness experience standards by a comfortable margin.
